

Creatrix

Poetry and Haiku Journal

09.10.2009

Issue #6 – September 2009: Haiku Categories: Haiku

Selector/Editor: Maureen Sexton

Haiku and Senryu

In this issue:

Rose Van Son
Liana Joy Christensen

Meryl Manoy
Natasha L Adams
Nicholas Barwell
Raquel Bailey
Kate Keating
Mike Burdett
Gary Colombo De Piazzi

winter sun

armchair recovered

an open book

spring shower

beneath the trellis

a dandelion chain

on the line

grandmother's apron

folds in the wind

autumn light

fruit ripe

on mother's guava

forest floor

under gum leaves

winter cache

burnt trunk

in winter light

a xanthorrhoea grove

carved from an olive branch grandmother's rolling pin old roses

grandmother's garden

flowering still

-Highly commended in the 2009 Creatrix Haiku Prize winter cloud

along the gravel path

lichen grows

fishing

in evening light

heron ripples the Swan

Rose van Son

frost cracks

dark trails on silver grass hidden snails remain

winter harbour

starfish under grease slick joy yields to sorrow

stingrays glide

turn blue to gold leaf

origami

Liana Joy Christensen

ebb and flow

tai-chi practice

on the beach

-winner of 2009 Creatrix Haiku Prize

sunny day

children in the park

birds flurry

autumn winds

walkers leaning

leaves swirl

raging storms

trees uprooted

shattered nests

Meryl Manoy

spring sunshine

weeping gum

nana's lace curtains

wattle blossom

scattered on gravel track

winter

mothers group

honey eater clucks

loudly

black cockatoo

drops gumnut

on the children below

Natasha L Adams

the brewery dog

is wearing quite a smile

this morning

sunday golf

losing a ball –

finding a frog

me, my book
and the ticking of the library clock

mindfully –

I pick the red nasturtiums filling the window

a single sunflower

Nicholas Barwell

summer solstice

a wind gust skims

her final chapter

first day of summer

her little smile

finally blossoms

through the peep hole

his words

bigger than him

bait:

her tattoo

catches his eye

Raquel Bailey

five Morellos

sour flush

we are out of sugar

the yellow lichen daubs the weathered stone cross painting out her name

elderberries,
plentiful and ripe, hang above the blood-stained path

a pylon, the highest point of the hill, has tree roots at its foundations

no Indian summer, he dead heads wet roses dark before sundown

Kate Keating

'Reflections on Michael Jackson'

the glove

reaching out

black or white

moonwalker

not of this earth

he departs

man in the mirror

what does he see

not himself

moonwalkers

here and there

Jackson and Armstrong

a sparrow

on stage

an eagle

the boy-man

behind the mask

lost

the child

of the child

in tears

in death

his genius

our compassion

in death

his anguish

unmasked

the boy

unknown to himself

the man

Mike Burdett

pink everlastings

unfold and face the sun – ballerinas curtsy

his walk determined

stride quick rarely glance opportunities missed

over the wall

opalescent flood waters flow overburdened with debris

Major Mitchell parrot goose steps across the grass resplendent in black

Gary de Piazzi

September 2016

Creatrix Poetry and Haiku Journal

FINIS